Of the many great bureaus necessary to the detail work of the National Government, perhaps none are more intelligently administered or better systematized than the disbursing agencies for the payment of pensions. These agencies, eighteen in number, located in large cities in as many States, except only the one at Washington, D. C, the capital of the Nation, are the subject of interest to a great may people. Thence, either by personal payment or through the mails, on vouchers as to identification necessary in every instance, the checks which evidence the gratitude of the Nation in dollars and cents to its surviving veterans, or the widows, orphans and dependent parents of those who have died, to the number of 975,000, are conveyed to the beneficiaries. This, it should be...
