Virtual communications is the technological innovation of the new millennium. Our current mode of communicating, conducting lectures and holding meetings will be forever changed by this new virtual infrastructure.

New products, tools and concepts have been developed that support the virtual process and this book will explain each while providing insights into their usage. We will discuss, in depth, tools like Adobe Connect, Presenter and Captivate. I will also introduce many new concepts that will help with your transition into this dynamic environment. These concepts are based on my successful utilization of these products in MBA classes, undergraduate courses, business meetings, conferences, symposiums, interviews and a host of other collaborative applications.

This book is a “roadmap” that will prepare you to utilize this virtual infrastructure whether you are an educator, student or business person.

Enjoy the book.
