From Head to Toe (Chinese Edition) Eric Carle

In this book, Eric Carle draws the "typical actions" of twelve animals with unique collages, such as: elephant can stomp, gorillas can beat its chest, and bison can shrug shoulders. The animals are inviting children, with the repeated sentences of "I can, can you?" and "I can do this ", to turn their heads, bent their necks, and swing their arms. During the game, children will be able to acquire some important skills, such as listening carefully, concentrating attention, and obeying the commands. In this book, children will learn the names of each of our body parts and their actions. Their ability to imagine, discover and think will also be cultivated.
