Neville Chamber's father left him ten billion dollars on the condition that he marry Madison Smith-Adams and stay married for a year. Madison agreed but treated him coldly.

Sty Carruthers, the president of the Chamber's company, complicated the situation. He was the next one in line to inherit. Neville recognized the evil in the man and hired Emil Beaudreaux as a bodyguard and assigned Delilah Anderson, his shy, withdrawn assistant, to be a liaison with Emil.

Delilah spent her entire life trying not to exist. She hid in plain, dowdy clothes and solitude. She had to spend days and weeks with Emil. Slowly, her fear receded. One day, she had the opportunity to bring Emil, a lonely widower, back to life. All she had to do was wear a bikini on the beach while he was around. It was more than she thought she could do, but she did it.

Carruthers tried to kill Neville and Madison on a mountain road. They ran through a dark forest until they reached an isolated cabin.

For the first time in her life, Madison clung to a man for protection. Neville loved it, but he wondered if it were only temporary.
