No Girls Allowed: The Jock & Jill Mentality of Sports Broadcasting CJ Silas

Sports journalism, especially in the fields of radio and television, seems to be a last bastion of old ways. After all this time, still almost no women are in radio or doing TV play-by-play in any major sports. CJ Silas is one exception. She went to both USC and Syracuse University, graduating from SU with a Bachelor's Degree in Broadcast Journalism. Before she could even walk the aisle to accept her diploma she was working full-time at ESPN in Bristol, Connecticut. In this book CJ walks us through her journey, from a six-year-old little girl at Dodger Stadium to a grown woman with a strong set of values and morals in a business full of men who may not be interested in what's best for her.
